20 Die in Cameroon Road Accident Some 20 people died on the spot and over 30 others were taken to medical centres for urgent attention early Monday morning after a 70-seat passenger bus crashed into a trailer poorly parked along the road at Tonga, a locality some 210 km north of the capital on the Yaounde-Bafoussam highway, state radio reported. Confirming the report, security forces said the passenger bus which left Bamenda in the North-West region was traveling to the capital until it bashed into the trailer at about 1:30 a.m. and burst into flames. "Once the passenger bus hit the trailer and caught fire its doors could not open, so most of those who died on the spot were roasted into ashes," a police officer and eyewitnesses who traveling along the same road told Xinhua. "Those who managed to save their lives had to break open some of the windows of the bus to jump out."

How the 'World's Most Expensive Car Crash' happened By now you've probably seen the aftermath of this weekend's massive supercar crash in Japan involving eight Ferraris, a Lamborghini, and a Toyota Prius — among others — that resulted in what may be upwards of $3.85 million in damage. Here's how it happened. Supercar accidents may occur with a sad frequency, but this 14-vehicle pileup in Japan is particularly awful thanks to the number of supercars involved. This wasn't a race track and all the cars, in theory, have brakes. When authorities arrived on the scene of the accident along the Chugoku Expressway in the southern part of the Yamaguchi Prefecture near Shimonoseki they found a mess of exotics tangled up with a few non-exotics, including a curious Toyota Prius.

Curbing Road Accidents Road accidents always bring pain to victims and their families. Currently in the news is the accident which has claimed more than 35 lives on the Tamale-Bolgatanga truck road over the weekend. When such accidents occur, one is compelled to ask whether the fight against carnage on the roads is being lost. Road accidents in Ghana continue to claim more lives than HIV and AIDS, malaria and other deadly diseases combined. This situation has given the country the tag of being one of the accident prone zones in the sub region. Regrettably though, majority of these fatal accidents can be prevented especially those caused through human errors. In the Central Region alone, 134 people have died from road accidents between January and October this year according to the MTTU. This is only an average of what happens in the country.

Separate road accidents claim 2 lives Two people were killed Monday in separate road accidents in the cities of Jbeil and Batroun, the National News Agency reported. In Jbeil, a woman was killed when her Kia Rio crashed into an electricity pole near Mar Gerges Church. The police arrived at the scene of the accident and a Red Cross ambulance transported the victim's body to a nearby hospital. Elsewhere, an unidentified vehicle killed a man in a hit-and-run accident on Batroun Highway.

New Road Safety Company to reduce road accidents A new company, Road Safety Management Services Ltd (RSMSL), has been created to deal with the high incidence of road crashes and accidents on Ghana's roads as a result of broken down vehicles left in the middle of the road. RSMSL will provide a broad array of road safety services to the country on a build-operate-and transfer basis under a public-private partnership scheme, whereby the company will finance the supply, installation and maintenance of a network of traffic cameras to check excessive speeding and reckless driving. It will also finance the operation and maintenance of vehicle recovery and towing services on the roads, to ensure rapid removal and recovery of accident/broken-down vehicles on the roads.

5 killed in four road accidents Five persons died in four road accidents in the city and its outskirts. Sirisha (26) of Vijayapuri Colony died and her husband Srinivas was injured in a road accident at Uppal on Sunday. The mishap took place while the couple were returning home after taking part in Ayyappa Swamy Pooja. A lorry hit their vehicle from behind near the Mahatma Gandhi statue on Uppal Ghatkesar road. In another accident, two persons were fatally run over by a van at LB Nagar. Laxman (40) of Chintalkunta, and Mohan (60) of BHEL, were going on a bike from Sagar road to LB Nagar when the van hit them. In a separate incident, an employee of a jewellery showroom was fatally knocked down by a speeding car at Greenlands on Saturday night.

Road Safety Groups Outraged as 'Hangover Cure' Drink Goes on Sale A drink marketed as a hangover cure is enraging Australian road safety groups who fear it will encourage drunk driving. The so-called "pick-me-up" Security Feel Better drink went on sale in Australia last week, with its website promising that users will feel the effects of its work breaking down alcohol in the blood system within 45 minutes. The potion's Sydney marketing director, Michael Romm, said the French-made drink, based on artichoke extract, contained an enzyme that helped break down alcohol in the liver five times faster than the body on its own. He said he had not had the drink scientifically tested, but believed it had the potential to lower blood-alcohol levels within the hour.

Accident research body scores funding boost The Centre of Accident Research and Road Safety in Queensland will receive a significant funding boost as part of government efforts to curb the state's road toll. The government's Motor Accident Insurance Commission has signed off on a $7.25 million cash injection over three years for CARRS-Q, with the funds to be directed at research, education and outreach activities. Finance and Arts Minister Rachel Nolan says the investment in accident research and road safety is necessary to prevent injuries and reduce the road toll. "Given that most crashes can be attributed to driver error, the significance of CARRS-Q and its research program cannot be overestimated," she says. Nolan says the program focuses on vulnerable road users, illegal and high-risk behaviours, injury prevention and occupational road safety.

Mir eager to prove beating Nogueira was no fluke It was a victory that brought Frank Mir full circle — from Ultimate Fighting Championship titleholder to near death and back to UFC champion — yet the fighter, almost three years to the day, still feels like he hasn't gotten due credit for one of the biggest wins of his career. When Mir faces Antonio Rodrigo Nogueira for a second time, in the co-main event of UFC 140 on Saturday at Toronto's Air Canada Centre, he has the chance to command the respect he says has been missing. "You can say that you had an (injury), but I think in general any time that you state that, 'Well, I lost because of an injury,' I think that's a disrespect towards your opponent," said Mir, as he readied for the rematch versus Nogueira.
